Lookup tables are an extremely effective method for cracking many hashes of the same type very quickly. The general idea is to pre-compute the hashes of the passwords in a password dictionary and store them, and their corresponding password, in a lookup table data structure. A good implementation of a lookup table can process hundreds of hash lookups per second, even when they contain many billions of hashes.

If you want a better idea of how fast lookup tables can be, try cracking the following sha256 hashes with CrackStation's free hash cracker.

• Reverse Lookup Tables

```
Searching for hash(apple) in users' hash list... : Matches [alice3, 0bob0, charles8]
Searching for hash(blueberry) in users' hash list... : Matches [usr10101, timmy, john91]
Searching for hash(letmein) in users' hash list... : Matches [wilson10, dragonslayerX, joe1984]
Searching for hash(s3cr3t) in users' hash list... : Matches [bruce19, knuth1337, john87]
Searching for hash(z@29hjja) in users' hash list... : No users used this password

This attack allows an attacker to apply a dictionary or brute-force attack to many hashes at the same time, without having to pre-compute a lookup table.
